JOBLESS RATE STABLE

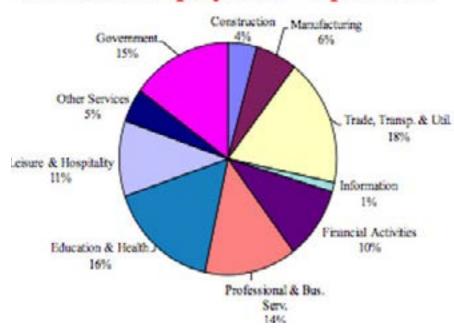

elaware's unemployment rate remained steady at 7.2% in April.

According to figures from the Delaware Department of Labor, the 7.2 was unchanged from the March rate. Adjustments to the March rate led to a downward revision from the original 7.3 percent figure. Click on the link that follows for the full report: 2013-04 MLR

George Sharply, of the Delaware Department of Labor, said the jobless rate has been affected by as little as the movement of 100 jobs. For example, the April jobless rate was actually close to 7.1 percent.

The report showed that the number of unemployed in the state was 31,900 in April, compared to 31,100 in April 2012. The nation's unemployment rate was 7.5% in April 2013, down from 7.6% in March 2013. In April 2012, the national jobless rate was 8.1%.

Employment growth continues

Since April 2012, Delaware's total non farm job total has increased by 7,600. That represents a gain of 1.8%. Nationally, jobs during that period rose 1.6%.

However, the state labor department said rate of increase would be difficult to maintain throughout the year. Sharply said the federal sequester spending cuts and other questions about the economy and spending are likely to hold down hiring.

A decline of 300 jobs in Delaware was reported between and April , but only after the March jobs total was revised upward by 1,000 from last month's preliminary report.

The revisions were spread across a number of industries, with the largest upward adjustment in financial services.

Although the number of employed residents rose by 300 in April, and the number unemployed fell by 400, April's unemployment rate remained at 7.2%, since the gains were not quite big enough to lower the jobless rate by one-tenth of one percent.

While few dispute that the state's economy is adding jobs, the situation mirrors the anemic performance nationally, with the jobless rate failing to fall below the 7 percent figure. That rate of growth also means the state has a long road ahead in making up for the loss of 20,000 jobs in 2009 as the state lost its automotive industry and other companies cut back.

Nationally, the situation has led to economists and others worrying about a long-term unemployment rate in the 7 percent range that would include higher numbers for younger workers, especially those without degrees.

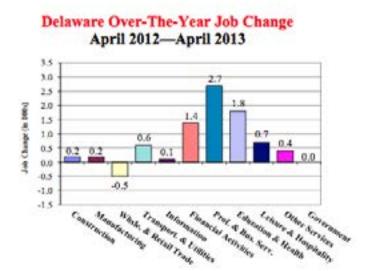

The situation also puts Delaware closer to the national economic performance after decades out pacing the nation. The state traditionally had a jobless rate a percentage point or more below the national figure, but is now within a few tenths of a percent of that rate.

Wholesale job count drops

Last week's unemployment report contained one surprising finding.

The one sector that has seen a decline in employment over the past year is the retail-wholesale area.

The decline came mainly in the wholesale side. Given the status of Delaware as the home of tax-free shopping, some growth might have been expected on the retail side, however.

All other sectors - including two of the most troubled, construction and manufacturing - saw marginal gains over the past year, as the economic recovery continued at a modest pace.

George Sharply, of the Delaware Department of Labor, cautioned against reading to much into the numbers, but noted that more detailed data has also showed a decline in employment in the sector. Reasons for the decline, in the absence of reports of major layoffs, may center on automation, lean staffing at stores and continued caution by employers.

REPORT: DEL. HAS LOWEST BUSINESS TAX BURDEN

report from Michigan-based Anderson Economic Group ranks Delaware the lowest in the nation, when it comes to business taxes. Maryland, a frequent target for critics of its business climate ranked, 7th.

The lack of a sales tax and low property taxes figured into the calculations. However, Anderson said the much criticized gross receipts tax levied in Delaware was also taken into account. The gross receipts tax amounts to a sales tax paid by a business.

Still, in an environment filled with chain retailers with standardized prices, it is often difficult for smaller merchants to pass that tax along to the consumer. The smallest businesses are exempt from the tax.

The report put the state's business tax rate at about 5 percent. Alaska had the highest tax rate, due to its levies on natural resources, including oil. The same was true for North Dakota and Wyoming.

The study is likely to become a key marketing tool for the state. Other recent reports have put the state further down in the rankings when it comes to business climate and economy.

In one report from Chief Executive magazine, Delaware slipped to 27 from 14 in its business ranking. According to the report, taxes and the regulatory environment were factors in the the ranking. In some business circles, utility costs and the state's renewable energy standards have been cited as a drag on efforts to attract and retain companies.

The Tax Foundation ranks Delaware No. 14 in business taxes. One potential drawback for business owners is the state's personal income tax, which ranks 17th in the nation, according to another Tax Foundation report.

Gov. Jack Markell issued the following statement following the release of the report: "A robust business environment contributes to a strong state economy and more jobs. Every day we work to attract, retain and grow businesses that want to make Delaware their home. We want to make Delaware globally competitive as a place to do business and will continue to nurture innovation and foster a business climate that attracts entrepreneurs and companies of all sizes." ATK Elkton rocket motor key part of successful test

TK's Elkton, Md. site, provided critical components for the recent successful test flight of a missile system aimed at protecting the United States and allies.

Flight Test Mission—19 was launched from a U.S. Navy Aegis Cruiser off the coast of Kauai, Hawaii. This test and others have been successful in intercepting and destroying missiles.

ATK supplies the third stage rocket motor to Raytheon Company, the prime contractor for the missile.

The test, code-named Stellar Hecate after a Greek goddess of magic, marks the 23rd successful intercept for the program.

Raytheon officials said the test was designed to test the ability of the missile technology to better identify the target.

The latest test involved a short-range missile and the ability of the system to determine the target to strike when the separation is taking place between stages of the missile.

"What we learned from this mission gives me great confidence in the missile's production readiness," said Mitch Stevison, Raytheon program director. The Defense Department is nearing a decision on launching full-scale production of the missiles. Production of the third stage motor takes place at ATK Defense Group's location outside Elkton.

The motor, according to ATK, has a unique combination of capabilities that permits the guided missile to deal with "a broad range of threats as it intercepts and destroys the threat."

The development of the systems is taking on greater importance as North Korea develops a nuclear program and missile system.

"The Aegis Ballistic Missile Defense System continues to demonstrate its effectiveness against threat-representative targets," said Cary Ralston, vice president and general manager of ATK's Missile Products division. "ATK is a proud member of the SM-3 guided missile team, and this test provides additional validation of the Block IB missile's production readiness."

ATK is an aerospace, defense, and commercial products company with operations in 21 states, Puerto Rico, and internationally. The company is based in Arlington, Va.

Food Lion's strategy; Grotto Pizza opens in Dover

Tood Lion announced has rolled out lower d prices and investments in 178 stores in five states, including Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia.

The company has been adding stores in recent years in more heavily populated New Castle County as it closes stores in other parts of the country.

Food Lion says the company offers customers lower prices on 6,000 items throughout the store and access to store brand products at new lower prices, including the company's My Essentials house brands. The company also says it improved its produce as part of its "Fresh From the Field" initiative.

Food Lion held grand re-opening festivities at the 178 stores. The company also plans to kick off a week of giving by donating fresh produce and store brand products to local charities, including $5,000 to the Food Bank of Delaware in Milford. By the end of 2013, Food Lion is on track to donate more than 245,000 pounds of food in the region.

With the latest announcement, more than 800 Food Lion locations have received these investments, representing nearly 80 percent of its store base. The company launched 167 stores in the Raleigh and Fayetteville, N.C., markets in May 2011, 268 stores in March 2012 in Virginia, West Virginia and the outer banks of North Carolina, and 269 stores in its hometown markets of Salisbury, N.C, and Charlotte, N.C., in July 2012.

Based in Salisbury, N.C., Food Lion has grown to more than 1,100 stores in 10 states. Food Lion is a company of Delhaize America, the U.S. division of Brussels-based Delhaize Group. The company operates more than 1,100 supermarkets in 10 southeastern and Mid-Atlantic states, and employs approximately 57,000 associates.

Possibility of Walmart dooms road sponsorship plan

he New Castle County Council narrowly rejected a plan to sponsor a $1.8 million state grant for a road to a proposed development that could include a Walmart store.

The resolution called for the council to act as sponsor for the construction of a road adjacent to the New Castle Town Center. The town center has seen little opposition over the years, as the land was the site of a gravel pit. However, Walmart now seems to be a lightning rod, given its reputation in labor circles.

Scott Green, executive director of the Delaware River and Bay Authority, said the decision by the council is not expected to have any immediate impact on development of the nearby New Castle Airport. The authority operates the airport.

The airport is seeing growth at existing employers, as well as the possibility of other companies coming to the site, according to Green and state officials.

A release from County Executive Tom Gordon's office indicated that he was concerned with the property becoming the site of a Super Walmart and affecting "mom and pop stores" throughout the county.

The property is owned by

Thomas Gordon

Stoltz USA, which is now battling the county over the Barley Mill development north of the New Castle property. The council previously approved a plan the Barley Mill but the Gordon administration has gone to court over the issue.

According to a release, New Castle County Chief Administrative Officer David Grimaldi told council members before the vote that the Gordon administration was recently approached to be the municipal sponsor for this application for a Delaware New Jobs Infrastructure Grant with the Delaware Economic Development Office, but learned that plans were in the works to bring a Walmart to the site. Alan Levin, director of the Delaware Economic Development Office, said he had no comment on the council decision.

The funding in question ties road construction to projects that create jobs. A Walmart Supercenter would create a large number of construction jobs and expand retail employment, an area that has seen a decline in the past year.

While not formally confirmed, plans by the world's largest retailer to add a store at the site and close a smaller store a short distance away were widely known in real estate circles.

"This is something that we can't support," Grimaldi stated. From everything we've heard Walmart would in fact be the tenant. That's one of the reasons we're not supporting it."

According to the county release, David Dunphy, a lobbyist with United Food and Commercial Workers Local 27 – which represents employees at Pathmark, Acme and others – said he did not know if Walmart was coming to the site in Continued on next page question. "But we still have concerns over who might be coming," Dunphy said. "I don't want to go through a long talk on Walmart and our feelings on their record. But who that tenant is does matter. All jobs are not created equal; there are better jobs — with health care, jobs with sustaining wages."

Both Acme and Pathmark have been trimming their unionized workforces and closing stores as union and nonunion competitors expand. Walmart has been responding with TV ads claiming it provides good jobs with upward mobility.

According to the release, Greggo & Ferrara Inc., a New Castle road builder and developer, had successfully applied to DEDO for grant funds with support from the prior Clark administration and the Delaware River and Bay Authority on behalf of the nearby New Castle County Municipal Airport.

The grant was to be used to construct a new road at the New Castle Town Center that would connect Old and New Churchman's Roads, upgrade Old Churchman's Road from U.S. Route 13 to the new road, widen and add turn lanes along a quarter mile of Churchman's Road and install a traffic light at the intersection of Churchman's Road and the new road, according to the release.

But the application process started over once the land was transferred from Greggo & Ferrara to Stoltz. When Gordon declined to support the new application, Councilman George Smiley (D-New Castle) attempted to have County Council act as the sponsor.

Smiley mentioned in committee and at the regular meeting in council chambers that he did not know who the tenant of New Castle Town Center would be, the release stated.

Grimaldi noted in the release that the "unclean hands" argument affected this property since this was a gravel pit site and the law was changed to include gravel pits within the definition of "redevelopment" along with all of the perks and benefits associated with it. That likely increased the value of this property, he added.

Smiley sponsored legislation to give away 2.15 acres of county land adjacent to the property in question as surplus land, Grimaldi said. Now, Stoltz was applying for nearly $2 million of state money to build a new road on our former property.

"So, our land was given away to DelDOT for free so that we could build a road right next to this Stoltz property," he said. We think this deal still has quite a few questions and we'd like to get answers before we sign on as any kind of a sponsor."

No mention was made of the possibility that the road could open up the area to further nonretail development around the airport, although it appears those plans are not in the immediate future.

Grimaldi said giving away county land for free rather than making Stoltz build the road on its own land was "fiscally irresponsible."

The council voted 6-5, with two abstentions, to oppose the resolution. Weiner refrained from voting while Councilman William Bell (D-Middletown) recused himself due to the fact that he was an employee at the Delaware River & Bay Authority.

New Amtrak locomotives roll off assembly line he first of 70 new electric locomotives from Siemens are rolling off the assembly line in Sacramento, Calif.. The first units of the $466 million order will be field tested this summer for entry into service in the fall.

"The new Amtrak locomotives will help power the economic future of the Northeast region, provide more reliable and efficient service for passengers and support the rebirth of rail manufacturing in America," said Amtrak CEO Joseph Boardman. "Built on the West Coast for service in the Northeast with suppliers from many states, businesses and workers from across the country are helping to modernize the locomotive fleet of America's railroad."

The Amtrak Cities Sprinter (ACS- 64) locomotives are being assembled in Siemens' Sacramento, rail manufacturing plant powered by renewable energy, with parts built from its plants in Norwood, Ohio, Alpharetta, Ga., and Richland, Miss. Nearly 70 suppliers, representing more than 60 cities and 23 states are also represented.

The new locomotives will operate on Northeast Regional trains at speeds up to 125 mph on the Northeast Corridor that passes through Wilmington and on Keystone Service trains at speeds up to 110 mph from Philadelphia to Harrisburg, Pa. Amtrak

In addition, all long-distance trains operating on the corridor will be powered by the new locomotives. The new locomotives are designed for easier maintenance, will improve energy efficiency by using a regenerative braking system that will feed energy back into the power grid.

The first three locomotives will undergo a comprehensive testing program this summer, including two at a U.S. Department of Transportation facility in Pueblo, Colo., and one on the NEC. Once they are commissioned, production of the remaining units will ramp up for monthly delivery through 2016.

The new locomotives are part of a plan to modernize and expand equipment. The new units will replace electric locomotives with between 25 and 35 years of service and average mileage of more than 3.5 million miles with some approaching 4.5 million miles.

High stakes casino bids in Md. not good news here

cross the line
in Maryland,
Penn National Gaming, Inc. is moving and grooving in hopes of a big payoff. The high-stakes battle in Maryland is not good news for Delaware's struggling racino industry.

Doug Rainey

The Pennsylvania-based company recently made a bid to build a big racino at the struggling Rosecroft race track in Prince Georges County, Md.

Penn National, the owner of Hollywood Casino Perryville in Cecil County has a plan to spin off the casino real estate it owns into a real estate investment trust, with Penn National managing the casinos.

One of the two Penn National casinos that would not be affected by the spin-off is Perryville. This maneuver could allow Penn National to get around Maryland's restriction on a company being unable to operate more than one casino in the state.

Penn National last year came out on the losing end of a referendum that allowed table games, but in return authorized a casino in Prince Georges. Also on the way is a casino in Baltimore from industry giant Caesars.

A Prince Georges casino did not sit well with Penn National, which has a big casino complex in Charles Town, W. Va., a 90-minute drive from much of the D.C. area.

Penn National pivoted and proposed the Rosecroft project while quickly adding table games in Perryville, which took a big revenue hit after the opening of Maryland Live near Baltimore. Compounding the misery for Perryville are $6 tolls to the other side of the Susquehanna.

The big barrier to building the $700 million Hollywood casino is MGM Resorts, which has a competing bid to build a Las Vegas-style casino in Prince Georges at National Harbor.

Published reports indicate that Las Vegas-based MGM pulled out all stops in submitting its bid to Maryland gaming authorities. The owner of the Parx gaming complex in Philadelphia has also submitted a bid as it sees more competition for dollars from the once sizable Maryland market.

As for Delaware, prospects are dim when it comes to more casinos. That became clear as the expansion bill from, Rep. Dennis Williams, D-north Wilmington, quickly became stalled in committee. After all, Dover Downs, the only company that publicly reports its casino results, has swung to the loss column. To the north, Delaware Park is cutting back on its racing schedule as purses and gaming revenues decline.

Dover Downs' performance bears watching, since it has also made big investments in a conference and hotel complex to make the complex more of a destination. Dover Downs has become a go-to conference spot for bigger downstate get-togethers. That adds more overall employment.

Should the losses continue, Dover Downs and the state's other two casinos will have a strong case for lowering the state's share of casino revenue. That percentage was increased during a past state budget crisis.

Trellist Marketing hosts 'Battle of the Brains'

rellist Marketing and Technology, Wilmington, hosted "Technically Challenged — A Battle of the Brains" during Philly Tech Week to demonstrate how rapid creative thinking and technical knowledge come together to solve real business challenges.

Technologists, designers, entrepreneurs and strategists were grouped together to see which team could develop the most innovative solution. A new video released by Trellist captures the spirit of the event and features interviews with event participants and judges, while also spotlighting the winners.

The video recap of Technically Challenged is now available here.

The winners of Technically Challenged integrated social media, a mobile application, and a virtual concierge service with the objective of increasing online sales for a fictitious Philadelphia specialty retailer. The winning team included Michael Carvin from New Jersey, Jessica Samph from Pennsylvania, John Cerami from Washington, D.C., and Constantin Bigu from Eastern Europe.

"All six teams developed surprising and unique solutions this evening. They really showed what can happen when a diverse group of analytical thinkers attacks a business problem together," said Chris Wallace, one of the event organizers from Trellist. "This is definitely in keeping with the spirit of Philly Tech Week."

Technically Challenged was hosted at the offices of First Round Capital on 4040 Locust Street, Philadephia.

It included six teams and more than 70 total attendees. The winning team received a basket of technology gadgets valued at more than $800 that included a Kindle Fire HD, Jawbone JAMBOX speakers, Bose headphones and Apple gift card.

Judges for the competition included a number of leaders from the Philadelphia-area marketing and technology community: Sarah Caputo, director of marketing communications, Comcast Cable; Kjell Hegstad, managing director for Mobile and Emerging Technologies, Capital One; Steve Kirton, president, Circa Healthcare; and Corinne Warnshuis, event coordinator, Technical.ly.

Founded in 1995, Trellist Marketing and Technology is a mid-size professional services firm with practice areas in Business Strategy, Marketing & Branding, IT & Application Development and Education & eLearning.

Growlers coming soon to some liquor stores lanked by liquor store and Delaware craft brewery owners at Fordham & Old Dominion Brewing companies in Dover, Governor Jack Markell last week signed into law House Bill 31.

The measure allows Delaware liquor stores to fill and sell growlers of draught beer on site. A growler is a glass or ceramic jug filled with draught beer, typically sold in a half gallon size. Until now, craft breweries were limited to selling growlers at their breweries or brewpubs. Neighboring states Pennsylvania and New Jersey already allow liquor stores to sell growlers Maryland's law is on county-by-county basis.

The signing came during American Craft Beer Week.

Breweries often produce draught beer varieties that are only available at their brewery or brewpub, which limits craft beer drinkers' ability to purchase certain varieties. By allowing liquor stores to sell growlers, bill sponsor, Rep. Debra Heffernan said that Delaware's small craft breweries will be able to expand their market and reach more customers, while liquor stores will be able to compete with their counterparts in neighboring states.

According to the Brewers Association, craft brewers and brewpubs provide nearly 110,000 jobs in the U.S. Delaware ranks 10th in the nation in the ratio of breweries to population, with nine operations in all three counties.

The Delaware Brewers Guild estimates that state craft brewers produced about 250,000 barrels of beer last year. Much of that production came from Dogfish Head and Fordham & Dominion Brewing.

"We are excited that the growlers will allow us to share draft-only beers, that had been previously only available to bars, with many of our loyal drinkers," said Jim Lutz, CEO of Fordham & Dominion Brewing. "We appreciate the community that comes along with these. Not only do they connect us to beer history, they provide us a means of commemorating special occasions."

Under House Bill 31, liquor stores will be able to purchase a growler filler permit for $150 every two years, allowing them to fill, cap and sell growlers to go.

Delaware is expected to issue growler filling permits in late May or early June.

Roth IRAS proposed for state workers

he state represented in Congress by the late William V. Roth Jr. for 34 years could one day offer its employees a retirement plan option that bears his name.

Rep. Trey Paradee, D-west Dover, introduced legislation that would add a Roth option to state-sponsored 403(b) and 457(b) savings plans that currently are offered to eligible teachers and state employees.

House Bill 148 would not require the state to contribute any funds into those retirement plans, and plan participants could still choose to make traditional, non-Roth contributions. The Roth option is named after Rep. and later Sen. Roth, who was instrumental in developing the Roth IRA in 1997.

"The Roth option is an extremely tax-friendly way to save for retirement because it allows participants to enjoy tax-free growth on their investments while they are still employed and to make tax-free withdrawals during retirement," said Paradee, a financial planner. "The fact that the state that sent Bill Roth to the U.S. Senate for 30 years doesn't offer a Roth option for its workers is surprising. Many surrounding states, including Maryland, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, began adding the Roth option over two years ago when it was authorized by Congress. It would be only fitting that Delaware adds the Roth 457(b) and 403(b) option for state workers and teachers."

In a traditional, non-Roth account, contributions are considered tax-deferred and are deducted from a participant's taxable income, which creates an initial tax savings. In addition, any growth that occurs in the account over time accrues on a tax-deferred basis. But when an individual retires and begins withdrawing funds from the account, the withdrawals are considered taxable income.

By contrast, a Roth account allows participants to contribute after-tax income so it does not create an initial tax savings.

Gains, over time, accumulate on a tax-free basis, and when withdrawals are made during retirement, the distributions are tax-free. There also are additional estate-planning benefits to a Roth account that allow individuals to pass on their accounts to family and loved ones on a more tax-friendly basis, according to a release.

AB&C WINS 28 AWARDS

Ab+c, a full-service marketing communications agency, won a total of 28 awards between two prominent healthcare competitions. At the 30th annual Healthcare Marketing Report Health Advertising Awards, the agency received 19 awards. Also, the agency hoisted nine awards at the 2013 Aster Awards, judged by Marketing Healthcare Today.

"The healthcare marketing industry is just as competitive as healthcare itself," says ab+c president and CEO John Hawkins. "Our team is tremendous. We start with top healthcare clients and add laser-focused strategy and engaging creative. It's a recipe for sustained success."

The Healthcare Advertising Awards are evaluated by a national panel of judges. More than 4,000 entries from 268 agencies were judged on creativity, quality, message effectiveness, consumer appeal, graphic design and overall impact. The agency won awards with 14 different clients. Along with 11 gold, two silver, one bronze and four merit awards, ab+c received a Best in Show for its physicians video mailer for MedStar Union Memorial Hospital, one of only 17 to earn this high designation.

The Aster Awards are produced by Marketing Healthcare Today, a health care publication.

State Chamber teams up with internship marketplace

he Delaware State Chamber of Commerce and Internships. com have launched a strategic partnership to provide a platform to connect local students with businesses across the state of Delaware. Internships.com and the Chamber will work together to help inform members about the benefits of experiential education, facilitate internship connections within the community and provide cutting-edge tools and resources to optimize the process of hiring interns, a release stated.

"Partnering with Internships.com is an exciting prospect for the Delaware State Chamber of Commerce," said President and CEO Joan Verplanck. "We like to provide our interns with valuable experiences, and this partnership will lead to even more value for the next generation of business leaders."

To support the partnership, Internships.com developed a dedicated microsite accessible to employers and students so they can directly search for and connect with each other for free.

"We're thrilled to partner with the Delaware State Chamber on this initiative," said Robin D. Richards, CEO of Internships.com. "Internships have become a vital way for employers to recruit talent into their organizations, and this platform is an ideal way to help the chamber facilitate that connection."

800 acres of Kent bay-area land protected with grant ore than 800 acres of coastal lands in the Delaware Bayshore, will be conserved and protected thanks to a federal grant awarded to DNREC's Division of Fish and Wildlife.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's North American Wetlands Conservation Act award of $1 million will be used, along with matching funds from the state Open Space Program, conservation partners and private contributors, to acquire property along the Bayshore in Kent County. Ten conservation partners have pledged matching funds that helped to make the grant award possible.

"Our appreciation to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, our Congressional Delegation and our partners for their tireless efforts in protecting our precious Bayshore lands and providing access to premier Bayshore habitat," said Gov. Jack Markell. "By conserving this land, we can offer world-class outdoor experiences supporting ecotourism and helping to ensure a diverse natural legacy for future generations."

The grant and support from critical partners will conserve lands that will fill a gap in a network of more than 4,000 acres of protected wetlands and uplands in the St. Jones River watershed. The conservation of these lands is a key priority of the Delaware Bayshore Initiative that protects coastal wetlands and globally significant wildlife habitat and expands public access and low-impact recreational opportunities.

The conserved lands will provide opportunities for hunting, fishing, birding and other wildlife watching, photography and nature study activities.

"We are extremely grateful for the generous financial support of Mt. Cuba Center and the hard work of DNREC's team in securing this important grant that will help preserve critical lands along the Delaware Bayshore," said Richie Jones, state director of The Nature Conservancy's Delaware Chapter. Newark bolding environmental workshop tonight

Newark will hold a Workshop on Environmental Quality and Natural Resources on Tuesday, May 21, from 7 p.m. in the Council Chamber of the Newark Municipal Building at 220 South Main Street. The event will include exhibits and presentations from the city's departments of Planning & Development, Public Works & Water Resources, and Parks and Recreation. After the presentations, the public will be invited to discuss Newark's needs and policy preferences for environmental quality, open space, and natural resources with Planning Commissioners and public officials.

The 18-month planning process effort began at Newark Day this past June. It includes a series of public workshops and meetings sponsored by the Newark Planning Commission. Public feedback from these meetings assists the Planning Commission in developing a recommendation to City Council for their adoption.

Chase staffers fill backpacks in hunger-fighting effort

Hive hundred employees from JPMorgan Chase spent Friday night packing 30,000 meals for children and seniors as part of Chase's work in alleviating hunger in the First State.

The volunteer event took place as part of the Wilmington Grand Prix weekend festivities. While 200 cyclists competed in the event, Chase volunteers packed more than 4,000 bags of food for the Food Bank of Delaware's children's Backpack Program and more than 20,000 meals for seniors at risk of hunger.

The Backpacks will be distributed to area schools, while the senior meal boxes will be distributed to atrisk seniors through the Wilmington Senior Center and Ministry of Caring.

The packing event took more than three hours to complete.

"I am amazed by the number of meals packed by this great group of volunteers from Chase," said Food Bank of Delaware President and CEO Patricia Beebe. "It really took teamwork to make sure all of the meals were completed in time. Chase's commitment demonstrates that it takes an entire community to serve the one in four Delawareans who depend on our network of hunger-relief services."

"In Delaware and across the country, Chase employees are passionate about helping their fellow community members and I'm proud to work beside them each and every day," said Tom Horne, general manager at Chase Card Services "This great event gave AARP an opportunity to increase awareness of the threat of hunger among older Delawareans," said Lucretia Young, AARP state director. "We enjoyed the opportunity to collaborate with the Food Bank of Delaware and Chase to reach so many dedicated volunteers and others who want to help."

Chase will organize a second meal packing event as part of the Dover race weekend festivities. On Sunday, June 2, race fans will pack 1,000 senior meal boxes inside the fan zone at Dover International Speedway.

ATK hosts students

recognize the importance of the ongoing development of the next generation of engineers in the areas of science, technology, engineering, and math (STEM).

The theme for EWeek this year was "Celebrating Awesome." Throughout the week, competitions were geared to challenge the participant's creative design skills and even included a Star Wars themed target competition.

As part of national "Introduce a Girl to Engineering Day (IGED)," eighth grade girls at the top of their class in math and science at Bohemia Manor Middle School in Chesapeake City, Md., were invited to meet with female engineers in various functional positions at ATK, including design, drafting, analysis and management. They designed and launched their own straw rockets, and witnessed two static rocket motor firings.

EWeek concluded with a Lunch and Learn presentation entitled "Your most AWESOME project," which provided four senior ATK engineers with the opportunity to present the most awesome projects they had worked on at ATK and the audience determined the winner.

Allan to Community Foundation

The Delaware Community Foundation named Bill Allan, former president of Verizon Delaware, as the new senior vice president for Southern Delaware.

Allan

Allan, who most recently served as president of Verizon Delaware, retired in 2011 from a 33-year career in telecommunications and came out of retirement in May to join the foundation. Allan will take over for Hugh Leahy, who is retiring at the end of May.

Allan began his professional career as a project manager at the Colgate-Palmolive Company.

After one year, he was hired into the engineering department of the New York Telephone Company.

He worked in engineering, marketing and government affairs before transferring to Wilmington to become the president of Verizon Delaware in 2005. While in Delaware, he was instrumental in introducing FiOS internet and television service to the state and managed Verizon's philanthropy activities in the First State.

Allan, who recently moved to Rehoboth from Wilmington, is on the board of the Delaware State Chamber of Commerce and was board chair in 2012. He is on the board of trustees of Christiana Care Health System, and the boards of the CCHS Visiting Nurse Association and the Delaware Alliance for Nonprofit Advancement.

He was the board chair of the Metropolitan Wilmington Urban League from 2009 to 2011, and is a past member of the Delaware Business Roundtable executive and education committees, the Governor's P-20 Council and the advisory board at the University of Delaware's Lerner College of Business & Economics. "We are truly fortunate to have Bill on our team," said DCF CEO Fred Sears. "He is a knowledgeable individual with great relationships and a real commitment to Delaware. We're looking forward to working together, with Bill to continue to expand philanthropy in Southern Delaware."

that Kevin Conmy has been appointed vice president for the company's Freedom Region. In this role, he will oversee the continued development of targeted sales and marketing operations for businesses across greater Philadelphia, New Jersey and northern Delaware.

Conmy

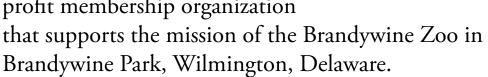

With over 22 years of telecom and management experience, Conmy previously served as executive director of business partner sales at Comcast's corporate headquarters. During that time, he spearheaded the development of both the company's referral partner program and the solutions provider (agent) program. He was also a key contributor to the success of Comcast's midmarket Ethernet launch.

Prior to joining Comcast in 2009, Conmy held various leadership positions in the telecom industry, including vice president and general manager with One Communications and vice president of sales with ATX Communications.

Montgomery named executive director

The Delaware Zoological Society appointed William S. (Bill) Montgomery, former chief of staff for the City of Wilmington (2001-2012), as executive director of the nonprofit membership organization

The executive directorship is a new position with leadership and development responsibilities created by the board of directors of the Delaware Zoological Society (DZS). "Bill Montgomery brings 30 years of executive management experience in state and local government and a wealth of experience in the governance of non-profits to benefit us," says Megan McGlinchey, Delaware Zoological Society board president. In addition to his position with the City of Wilmington, Montgomery has served on the boards of several non-profit organizations.

The Delaware Zoological Society has about 2,000 members. Membership with DZS entitles members unlimited free admission to the Brandywine Zoo throughout the year and comes with many advantages including discounts to programs offered at the zoo, like camps, free admission or discounts to zoos throughout the United States, discounts in the Zootique gift shop, invitations to members'only events at the Brandywine Zoo, free admission passes for guests, and a subscription to the zoo's quarterly publication, Zoo News.

Membership supports the conservation education programs at the zoo and overall mission of the Zoo which is to professionally exhibit specific species of animals and provide a comprehensive program of conservation, education and recreation for the citizens of the state of Delaware.

Guest viewpoint: Is major medical insurance enough?

By Henry "Chick" Chinski

Editor's note: Chinski, of Middletown, is an independent health, life and disability insurance broker for USA Benefits Group. He can be reached at 302-832-1315, via email: hchinski@usabg.net or on the web at www.joinhenryc.com

Most think that having major medical insurance alone is enough, however, most never consider the true cost of illness or injury.

Henry Chinski

Let us first look at some facts. Better than 50% of bankruptcies are filed by families that had some sort of major medical event such as cancer, heart attack, stroke or accident. Of those who had to file bankruptcy, more than 60% had major medical insurance in place.

Consider the following fact from the American Hospital Association. 68% of all hospital confinements are related to the three most common critical illnesses, Cancer, heart attack, and stroke. 14% of all hospital confinements are related to accidental injuries. What that means to you in numbers is that 82% of the hospital confinements will do serious unplanned damage to your savings account.

Depending on how long you are laid up and out of work, this could significantly reduce your household income, impact your family's lifestyle, possibly wipe out your savings or even worse. You too could become one of the above bankruptcy statistics.

Critical illness and accidents represent 75% of the dollars spent on healthcare. Most are six figure claims. The average time of lost wages is equal to 7.6 months.

Ask yourself if you could afford 7 ½ months of lost income. Even if you are fortunate enough to have employer sick leave pay at a reduced rate which is typically 50-60% of income, could you afford 7 ½ months at this reduced income level?

Unfortunately, 1 in 2 males and 1 in 3 females will develop some sort of cancer in their lifetime. The good news is that in the last 10 years the survival rate for cancer has gone up over 30%.

Additionally, the survival rate for heart attacks and strokes has gone up over 20%. There is a great chance that you will survive the illness but if unprepared you may not survive financially.

The reality is that even if you have major medical insurance and have your medical bills paid, (after you pay deductibles and co-insurance), you will still need to continue to pay for the following:

- Uncovered medical expenses
- Possible expenses for experimental treatment
- Lost income for patient and/or spouse
- Mortgage payments
- Car payments
- Credit card payments
- Child care expenses

The best time to think about your family's protection is now.

Once a sickness, critical illness or accident occurs it will be too late. Think of it like auto insurance. You unfortunately cannot get it after you have an accident.

CIGARETTE SMUGGLING RING SUSPECT ARRESTED IN DEL.

New York AG says members stored smokes in Sussex ew York Attorney General Eric T. Schneiderman and New York City Police Commissioner Raymond W. Kelly announced the indictment of 16 members of a criminal ring that flooded New York with more than a million cartons of untaxed cigarettes imported from Virginia.

The ring and/or associates, some with ties to terrorist organizations, allegedly used a storage facility in Selbyville, Del. as a shipment point Cigarette smuggling increased sharply after New York levied sharply higher taxes than surrounding states.

The Associated Press reported Delaware State police arrested Adel Abuzahrieh, 47 on Wednesday near Milford as the investigation wound down

New York Attorney General Schneiderman speaks at press conference that announced indictments.

Delaware State troopers reported finding 201 cases of cigarettes in the truck he was driving. A large amount of cash was also found, the AP reported. He is reportedly being held in lieu of more than a $12 million bond

A release from the New York Attorney General's office said such rings in the past helped fund organizations like Hamas and Hezbollah.

A 244-count indictment charges 16 coconspirators with enterprise corruption, money laundering and related tax crimes. Each of the defendants faces up to 25 years in prison.

During a 12-month investigation, law enforcement seized more than 65,000 forged NYC/ NYS cigarette tax stamps that were not yet affixed to packs of cigarettes, and nearly 20,000 cartons of untaxed cigarettes.

The investigation, which has so far uncovered $55 million in illegal cigarette sales, is continuing.

New York City Police Commissioner Raymond W. Kelly said, "The association of some of the suspects in this case to the Ari Halbestram's killer, the Blind Sheik and a top Hamas official concerns us. While it hasn't been established yet where the illicit proceeds ended up, we're concerned because similar schemes have been used in the past to help fund terrorist organizations like Hamas and Hezbollah."

Smuggling ring may have ties to Hamas, other groups

"The proceeds from this alleged scheme can be used to fund a host of other criminal acts that threaten national security and public safety of Americans at home and abroad," said James T. Hayes Jr., special agent in charge of HSI New York. "We remain committed to working with our local, state and federal law enforcement partners to ensure criminals are tracked down and brought before a court of law."

As search warrants were executed, investigators seized three handguns from ring-leader Basel Ramadan. Found was $1.4 million stashed throughout Ramadan's Ocean City, Md., residence, including stuffed into black plastic garbage bags. Investigator seized over 20,000 cartons of cigarettes from defendants' homes, cars and storage facilities in four states. They seized $200,000 in cash from defendants' in New York City.

Through the use of electronic surveillance, physical surveillance and the review and analysis of financial records in conjunction with other investigative tools, the Attorney General's investigation revealed that the head of the enterprise, Basel Ramadan, and his brother, Samir Ramadan, obtained cigarettes from a wholesaler, Cooper Booth Wholesale, Inc., in Virginia and stored them in a public storage facility in southern Delaware.

Several times a week, co-conspirator Adel Abuzahrieh, of Brooklyn, drove with tens of thousands of dollars in cash from New York to Delaware where he gave the Ramadans the cash in exchange for cigarettes. Beyond the $55 million in purchases to cigarettes, the Ramadans have generated more than $10 million in profits from illegal activities, prosecutors said.

In addition to the Ramadans, the enterprise – all of whose members are Palestinian – consisted of several New York-based cigarette distributors, several New York-based cigarette resellers and Abuzahrieh, who transported cash, sometimes more than $100,000 per trip, and cigarettes between New York and Delaware. Once the distributors took possession of the merchandise approximately 20,000 cartons of cigarettes a week - they distributed it to the resellers, who in turn sold the untaxed cigarettes to many Arab markets and grocery stores in Brooklyn, Queens, the Bronx and Staten Island.

One of the resellers, Mohammed Seif, also resold the untaxed cigarettes to various grocery stores in Albany and Schenectady Counties. The sales tax revenue lost to New York state is estimated to be significantly in excess of $80 million.

The Ramadan brothers deposited more than $55 million from their untaxed cigarette sales into small local financial institutions in and around Ocean City, Md., and used that money to purchase additional cigarettes for illegal sale.

Among the agencies involved in the probe were the Delaware and Maryland State Police Departments; and the United States Attorney's Offices in Delaware and Maryland.
